There was a bit of romance connected with the press Derby race, which took place a fortnight go. The Richmond Times reports a singular explo sion of a latch-key, with which a gentleman was opening his door a few days since. The report was as loud as that made by any ordinary pistol, and the force of the explosion shattered the key ring and scattered the keys, blowing a button off his glove and injuring his hand. The cause assigned for the explosion is this: The lock was of a and had been heated by the sun, and the key being of steel, and also heated, had, by com-ing in contact, caused the thermo-electric current. This current often causes an explosion, the shock of which is not unlike that of an electric

A steamer arrived at St. Joseph, Mo., the other day, which made the trip from Fort Benton in nine and a quarter days. Her officers report that both mercantile and mining business in Montana was very backward, on account of the late spring, but the moment active operations opened, re-newed activity would pervade the whole country, all being eager to make up for lost time. A correspondent of the Lavaca Commercia writes that Judge L. A. PASCHAL (plain), and Judge McKay (colored), delivered some memorle specimens of oratory to the negroes at Seguin sently. Pascual informed his audience that all the negroes in Prussia vote and hold office, and that one-third of the crowned heads had succombed to a republican form of government last year. A distinguished German professor recently an nounced that if a drop of human blood was placed under a microscope capable of magnifying it twenty millions times larger, it would show all the kinds of animals that ever have existed, or now exist, on earth. In the blood of a healthy person the animals are quiet; in that of a sick person they fight. From this he draws the conclusion that man has within him all the elements from which the universe was created. He further says that if a died cat was flung in a pool of water and left to decompose, the drops of water would show, when under a microscope, all the animals belonging to the cat species.

CURRENT TOPICS.

A PEW DAYS ago we noticed Dr. MAXCY "Christianity and its Conflicts." He views his subject from the standpoint of a strict Roman Catholic, but his book discusses politics as well as religion : and the following extract upon the presi of this country will give the reader an idea of the autho:'s opinions upon general questions: "Liberty of the press is a good thing, so long as truth, morality, virtue and the general welfare are maintained; but when it degenerates into an organized system of falsehood and deception for the sake of securing the selfish ends of a party or of individuds, it becomes a blighting curse. There is no absurdity, no wickedness, no violation of religion law or morals, which the radical press of the North could not now instil into the minds of their millions of credulous readers as solemn truths. So degraded and debauched has public sentiment become, that nothing but reckless and unfounded assertions, calumnies, and disgusting details of murlers, seductions, murderers' confessions, hanging, dog-fights, cock-fights, pugilistic en counters, and the like, are palatable. From yearly file of any one of these journals may be collocted a respectably sized volume of these immoral and corrupting details. This is, indeed, liberty of the press, but it is fearfully demoral izing and derogatory to the common welfare. It is the same kind of liberty which the pirate takes when he preys upon the commerce of the world. One robs his victims of gold and merchandise, and calls it the 'freedom of the seas;' the other robs them of truth, virtue and honor, and terms it the 'freedom of the press.' No government has ever existed long where this universal and unrestrained liberty of the press has obtained; for licentious ness of thought, a general deterioation of public and private morals, and destructive revolutions and civil wars have invariably been their legiti-mate sequences. These calamities in turn have of person and property."

MR. JOHN TALBOT, of the Robinson (III.) Constitution, gives his personal recollections of the youth of General SHERIDAN. He says: "About twenty-eight years ago, we, the humble editor of this little paper, snatched SHERIDAN—then a boy of twelve years-from humble obscurity, and gave him a place in our store. We found him bright, willing and accommodating, and we took consid erable pains in instructing him in the intervals of business. We kept him a couple of years he then wont into a dry goods establishmen staid in that for some time, until, through the influence of General RITCHEY, then a member of Congress, he was admitted to West Point. He had been, until the breaking out of the Southern war, engaged in the Indian territories Soon after the war began, our oldest son entered the army. We wrote to SHERIDAN requesting his influence towards his promotion. He promised by letter, which we have before us, to use his in fluence to have him promoted. He expressed the gratification it would give him to do something to prove to me his grateful remembrance of the many favors [I] conferred upon him in days gone by.' But my boy was killed soon after, and nothing, of course, was done." The Marietta (Ohio) Times copies this, and its editor says : "From our tenth to our thirteenth year, we used to know John Talbor well, and we have some personal knowledge of the facts touching his relations to PHILIP H. SHERIDAN, from 1841 to 1844. After PHILIP left Mr. Talbor's hardware store, he went into the dry goods house of DAVID WHITEHEAD, and continued with WHITEHEAD for two years. He then engaged with FINCK & DITTOR as a salesman, and he was in their employ until 1848, when, as Mr. TALBOT says, General THOMAS RITCHEY, at that time representative in Congress from the Ohio Thirteenth District, nominated him as a cadet to the West Point Military Academy."

WE HAVE on several occasions spoken of the great national work, recently published in Paris, n the shape of a Guide Book, the result of the combined literary, scientific and artistic talent of France. Vicron Hugo's introduction is at the same time also very eloquent, but not a little tiremarm fied, and escaped the wrath to come.

Callpurse, he could afterwards afford to joke about it. of a negro, the inscription of 'A l'inster de Paris." "Let Europe be welcome," he adds, "Let her enter and take possession of her home, that home name;" and we are further told that here all the great social questions of the age are mooted and lecided. Here the rights of the individual, of labor, of women and of children have been sustained, and here has been recognized the principle of the inviolability of human life. "Death, it is true," he says, "has its place at the Exposition. but 'tis in the form of canon, not in that of a guiljotine;" a distinction which Mons. Victor Huno terms a "delicatesse." He adds : "A very fine scaffold was offered, but was refused." For ourselves, we acknowledge to a lingering uneasiness, when we contemplate the fact that in no kind of manufacture does the Exposition show greater is the more reason, therefore now, for our improvement than in that of implements of war, and we are lost in admiration as the ingenuity with which M. Hugo finds that, after all, the end of these things must be peace. We are all to be one great nation, and to live in unity, France becoming, in some incomprehensible manner, as Athens was Greece, and as Rome is Christianity, the world. LOUIS GAYLORD CLARKE, whilom editor of the old Knick rbocker Magazine, and admiringly remembered by a large circle of readers and friends throughout the country, is thus "paragraphed" by the Evening Gazette: "You can usually see Mr. CLARKE, on any fine morning, trudging sturdily down the leafy sides of his beloved 'Cedar Hill,' carefully attired and kid-gloved, taking his seat in a railroad car, producing his favorite morning paper, and reading uninterruptedly while the train ears him townward, though he, of late, complains that the motion of the cars affects his eyes unpleasantly. He wears the glasses of old age, and, hough he bears his years remarkably well, time is telling on him. He is a trifle less urbane and inctions than he was in his better days-a trifle more reserved and untalkative-but this is not grade and character. One reason for nonstrange, all things considered. A man who had been all his life somewhat a lion in literary circles. and who suddenly finds himself no longer suchwho looks back on a long list of brilliant minds large hearts, and generous hands, liberally endowed www 'world's gear' now all departed—sees the pride of his lusty manhood, the magazine he edited for thirty years, also departed—himself left, at the end of all these years of labor, no better off in his pocket than he was at their commencement-may be pardoned if he does not hold his head as erect, nor keep his spirits as light, as in other days. In a domestic regard, Mr. CLARKE has every occasion to be satisfied with life. He has a pleasant family of children, now all grown to manhood or womanhood, who love their father devotedly, and themselves give good promise of sefulness and success in life. The eldest daughter is married to a wealthy gentleman of this

THE ISSUE BEFORE US.

July is coming on apace; and with it will ome registration, the first great practical step toward political reconstruction. The election that is to follow, and likewise also the Conven tion that is to give us a new State Constitution will be very much influenced by the sourse and conduct of our people in the discharge of this first prescribed duty, viz: Registration. True the present moment is critical. Complications not anticipated a few weeks ago, have arisen within the past few days, which may result in eriously retarding the peaceful, speedy, and at least moderately satisfactory solution of the vexed question that has been throwing a blighting influence upon our industry and activity, our private and our social life, and all but threatened the very extinction of our future political existence. Reconstruction was going on smoothly, all over the South, in accordance with the programme laid down by Congress when suddenly we find a marked difference of opinion as to the meaning of this Act, in the construction of the President, and the severa officers to whom he had delegated its execution.

He insists on the proposition that Paris is ficient to cause irreconcilable clienation; but, apart for an extra session of Conga 's under certain contingencies. Congress, it is yow all but certain, will meet in the course of at month and once this question of recons action is again before them it is impossible to y what further experiments they may be inc. 1ed to make, what pains and penalties to inflict, nor when we shall be emancipated from our present disabilities.

This last mentioned difficulty between Congress and the President has arisen through no fault of ours; and in order to avoid the consequences we so much deprecate, we should address ourselves earnestly and with full purpose to a proper discharge of the duties assigned us; and we cannot but hope and believe that if Congress shall find us in good faith carrying out the programme they marked out for us at their last session, they will carefully consider, and be slow to undo their own handiwork that is found to fulfil the purpose intended. There taking an active part in this great drama.

From what we have heard, we believe there are few who openly profess that they do not intend to register. But we fear there are many who, from various motives, will fail to avail themselves of this privilege. There can be no serious argument adduced in favor of non-registration. There is not a single newspaper in all the South, as far as we know, (and we exchange with nearly the entire Southern press) that counsels such a course. Ex-Governor PERBY, who ranks with the foremost of those who are opposed to the Military Reconstruction Act, nevertheless strenuously advises registration by all who are not disfranchised. Still there are many who will not register from mere apathy. They may be persons who never took much interest in political matters, and thus will be at no loss to find excuses for their conduct, satisfactory to themselves at least. Some disingenuously will plead a want of time, and so there will be excuses of every compliance, we fear, although perhaps not often expressed, is a clinging to old prejudices. "What! shall I bemean myself, go to register with a negro to sit in judgment over my qualifications, then go the polls and cast my vote alongside of my late slave, and then perhaps sit in the Convention and the Legislature side by side with these negroes? No. I would rather have nothing more to do with politics as long as I live." This is all wrong, Such language is not indicative of an absence of ambition, as we are speciously asked to believe. It is morbid discontent, rebellion against fate, and therefore unmanly. The example of General Long-STREET and of many of his fellow soldiers. shows more of true manhood. To face danger at the cannon's mouth, bravely, and with soldierly fortitude, is much less difficult, than to tion. Ignorant and uneducated soldiers are found in every nation and in every army who will stand a bayonet charge, while nor HANNI-BAL nor Napoleon were equal to the last named ordeal. Far greater moral courage was required to take the course of General Long-B. F. PERRY, and others who advocate a continued resistance to the decrees of fate.

Again, no one has a right wilfully to forfeit his franchise, simply because he is himself devoid of political ambition. Voting is a duty no less than a privilege. "No man liveth to himself." However great his own personal indifference, no man has a right to endanger the interests of society; and this he can be shown to be guilty of, at this time, by failing to avail himself of every political right or privilege within his reach. Most of our citizens, especially the more intelligent and educated. have already divested themselves of prejudice against the colored race, and are fully prepared by State enactments, to accord them all those civil and political rights, already theirs placing himself in the situation of Noah after the by virtue of Congressional legislation.

There are some among us, whose course, we confess, is not clear to us. There can, in rewho have sprung up within the last five or six ality, here in the South, be only a choice between two parties, those who accept the Congressional Reconstruction Act, and will coville recently, was requested to define his position operate in its execution, and those who, from on politics, which he did in a letter to "John Hap- whatever motives, will, either by active opposition, or under one form or other of "passivism," labor to defeat the purpose of the not. We can understand both of these parties, and also their motives. But we have not yet been able to ascertain where those stand who claim to belong to neither of these two parties, who deny being opposed to the Reconstruction Act, yet denounce those who earnestly support it. Their platform is in the air. It has no substratum of reality or fact; and those who trust the airy fabric will suddenly find themselves precipitated to the earth, and rolling in the dust.

In conclusion, we copy the following para graph from a recent number of the Richmond Whig, one of the most sensible of the Reconstruction papers in the South :

struction papers in the South:

We have shown in former articles that it is necessary to conform to all terms and conditions of the reconstruction laws, and that in order to make reconstruction effective and acceptable to Congress, and at the same time to guard against confiscation and proscription, it may be necessary for us to vote for liberal-minded and competent Republican candidates for the Convention, in spite of the companionship in which they are found. Some will doubtless exclaim: "Honor forbids such humiliation." We turn over all such to Gen. Longstreet, who has declared himself willing to unite in efforts to restore Louisiana to her former position in the Union through the party now in power;" and who not by announces that he "will be happy to work in any harness that promises relief to our distressed people, or harmony to the nation." The last paragraph of General Longstreet's letter deserves to be written in letters of gold. It is—"If every man in the country will meet the crisis with a proper appreciation of our condition, and come fairly up to his responsibilities, on tomorrow the sun will smile upon a happy people, our fields will again begin to yield their increase, our railroads and rivers will teem with abundant commerce, our towns and cities will resound with the tunult of trade, and we shall be invigorated by the blessings of Almighty God."
